

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Chapter	Page
I. Introduction	1
The Problem of Selection	6
The History of the SAT: A History Largely Untold	8
The Critics of Testing in General	13
Criticisms of the SAT Specifically	15
Present Controversies with Historical Antecedents	17
Controversy: Predictive Validity	17
Controversy: Overuse and Misuse of the Test	20
Controversy: Coachability and Score Changes	21
Controversy: National Score Declines	23
This Researcher's Perspective	24
Terminology in the History of the SAT	27
Conclusion	28
II. Early Steps toward formal testing for college admissions	30
Examinations in Early Colleges	32
Oral Admissions Examinations	33
A University Model Emerges	35
The American Public High School Emerges	35
The Certificate System	37
Written Admissions Examinations	41
Institutional Essay Examinations: Criticisms and Problems	44
The Formation of the College Board	46
College Board Exams Vs. Secondary School Certification	51
The College Board Essay Exams	53
The Nature of the College Board Questions	54
The Introduction of a "New Plan" of Essay Exam: A Reform	55
Conclusion	66

III. A New Tool To assess aptitude--psychologists create the Intelligence test	69
Introduction	69
The Significance of a "Quantified Society"	72
Testing and the Professionalization of Psychology	73
The Early Heritage of Intelligence Tests	74
New Instruments with No Theoretical Underpinning	81
Intelligence Testing in World War I	82
Intelligence: Measured But Not Defined	86
Internal Professional Debate	87
The Public Debate	92
Intelligence and Heredity	95
Intelligence and Race	99
Brigham's Study: Its Impact on Social Policy	101
Brigham's Book: The Critics	105
Brigham Recants	109
The Controversy Over Implications for Democracy	109
The Possible Uses of the New Intelligence Tests	113
Conclusion	115
IV. Testing the tests--intelligence tests go to college	117
Introduction	117
Testing the Tests: Early Applications of the Intelligence Tests	119
Intelligence Tests for Disciplinary Action	123
Intelligence Tests for Advising	125
Intelligence Tests for Sectioning of Classes	127
Intelligence Tests for Comparisons of Institutions	129
Intelligence Tests to Compare Departments	131
Intelligence Tests for Admissions	132
The First Step: Intelligence Tests for Admitting Veterans	134
Intelligence Tests for Admission: Beyond Veterans	135
The Benefits of Intelligence Tests in Admissions	144
Criticisms of the Innovation	146

The Major Tests Used Prior to the SAT	150
The Alpha	153
The Institutional Examinations	152
The Thorndike Intelligence Test	154
Intelligence Tests and Statistical Correlations	156
Correlations With Academic Success	159
Correlations With Faculty Perceptions of Ability	160
Correlations With Student Self-Perceptions	163
Conclusion	164
V. THE COLLEGE BOARD CREATES ITS OWN INTELLIGENCE TEST--THE SAT	167
Introduction	167
The 1920 Commission	168
Mounting Criticism of Existing Examinations	170
The 'New Type' Multiple Choice Content Examinations	172
Continuing Work on Psychological Examinations	174
Potential Competition from the American Council on Education	175
The 1924 Commission: The Board Responds to Competition	177
The Committee of Experts	181
Brigham and The Technical Committee of Experts	188
Brigham: His Background	189
Brigham Within the Profession	192
Brigham Renames the "Psychological Examination"	196
Conclusion
VI: CONFIGURING AND ADMINISTERING THE FIRST SAT	200
Introduction	200
The Novelty of the Examination	200
The SAT as a Reflection of its Ancestry	206
The Verbal Section	208
Mathematics: On, Off, Then On the SAT	214
The Experimental Section: An SAT Innovation	218
The Persistent Question of Speed and Power	224
Test Security	229
The Scoring Processes and Scales	231

Member Institutions React to the SAT	234
Press Reaction to the SAT	237
Conclusion	238
VII. The Conflict: Wide Use or Wise Use of Testing	240
Introduction	240
Psychology and Testing in the 1930s	241
Brigham as Associate Secretary	242
The Gatekeeper as Usher	244
Brigham's Study of Error	246
The Validating Examinations	251
The Pennsylvania Study: Expanding Standardized Testing	254
The PEA and Testing	257
1934 Council on "Problems and Plans"	259
Conant's Scholarship Tests	261
Founding the GRE--Cloning the SAT	265
The Aborted Attempt to Found ETS	275
Conclusion	282
VIII. Conclusion: World War II, incorporation, and the final ossification	284
Introduction	284
1941: A Pivotal Year for the SAT	286
Equating the Test	287
The Demise of the Essay	290
The Introduction of Machine Scoring	294
Manpower Shortage: The Rationale for the Essay's Demise	295
Testing for the Military	297
SAT During the War	299
The Postwar Explosion of Testing	300
The G.I. Bill and American Colleges	303
Educational Testing Service: The Final Ossification	304
The Success Story	307
Conclusion: Trends Continue to the Present	308
Bibliography	313

