9. No grade in an honor course shall be given to a candidate for honors until he comes up for a degree, except in the case of a candidate whose admission has been revoked, in which case the course shall be graded according to the general rule. If the work in the honor course has been satisfactory, the fact shall be reported at the end of the semester, but the grade shall be reserved for the recommendation of the proper examining committee. If this committee considers the candidate deserving of honors, the grade of "Honors" shall be recorded for the honor course. If the committee is unwilling to recommend him for honors, it shall designate the grade to which it considers him entitled.

10. The examining committee, to be constituted for each candidate for honors one month before the examination, shall include the instructors in honor courses, and the head of the honor department, and also an equal number of instructors chosen by the president, upon application from the head of the honor department concerned, from other departments of the University, or from other colleges. The examining committee shall not be less than five in number, and the instructors from the honor department shall not constitute a majority. [The appointments shall be notified to the registrar, and by him to the appointees. A quorum shall consist of at least five members.]

11. When a thesis is to be presented for the honor examination, it shall be filed with the registrar at least ten days before the honor examinations and notice thereof shall be given immediately by the registrar to each member of the examining committee.

Notice by each member of the examining committee that he has passed upon the thesis shall be filed with the registrar before the examination.

12. Of the final examination, one part shall be oral, and one part written. The oral examination, which shall cover in one all the honor work in one department shall continue for at least two hours. The written part in any department shall occupy a minimum total of four hours, except in case a thesis has been presented, in which case it may be omitted. The written part shall be concluded at least one week before the oral part, and submitted to all members of the committee before the oral parts.

Questions for the written part of the examination shall be prepared by the instructors under whose honor courses have been taken, but the other members of the examining committee shall be given an opportunity to add any questions they desire.

The questions for the written part of the examination shall be filed with the permanent records of the University.

13. Candidates for honors shall be examined in both the honor courses and the general subject of the department, but in estimating the character of the work in the general subject their grades already recorded in that subject shall also be considered.

In the award of honors, evidence of the candidates' capacity for original and independent thinking shall be considered. It is not intended that these honors shall be won merely by a limited amount of work, however excellent.

14. Instructors may at their option omit reports of absences of honor students from honor courses; but absences from other courses taken by honor students shall be reported according to the general rule.

III. Honors in a given subject and honors in general scholarship.
printed in a separate list in the catalogue at the head of the register of students, under the heading CANDIDATES FOR HONORS. The names of all juniors and seniors who have so far maintained the credits required for honors in general scholarship shall be included in the list of candidates for honors.

The record of these honors shall be made a part of the permanent record of the University, and mentioned in the diploma, the commencement program, the catalog of the succeeding year, and the general registers which may contain the name of the recipient. On the diploma honors in a given subject shall take precedence over honors in general scholarship, e.g.: "Thomas Simpson is graduated with Honors in Greek and with Honors in general scholarship".

Every effort shall be made to give to, first, honors in a given subject, and, next, honors in general scholarship, such additional publicity and preference, e.g.: in recommendations for appointments, as will tend to make those honors highly esteemed by the recipients as well as by the student body generally.
